IRISH FREE STATE

NOW DOMINION

Timothy Healy and Parliament Officers Take Oaths At Simple Ceremony.

Dublin, Dec. 6.—Inauguration of the Irish Free State as one of the Dominions of the British Empire took place today. The ceremony was simple and unmarred by hostile demonstrations from the Republican minority. The oath was administered to Timothy Healy as Governor General by the Lord Chief Justice at Mr. Healy's residence in Chapelizod on the Liffey, three miles west of Dublin, and afterward the new Governor General administered the oath to Prof. Michael Hayes as Speaker of the Dail.

There were no crowds outside the Parliament House when the Dail met tonight. The Ministers and other connected with the Government made their way to the Parliament chamber by a private entrance from the adjoining Government offices, and no visitors were admitted.

The members assembled punctually at 5 o'clock. William T. Cosgrave, president of the Dail Cabinet, and Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs and nephew of the new Governor General, were among the first arrivals, and occupied the same seats as in the old Dail Eireann. At 5:10 o'clock Speaker Hayes announced that he was authorized by the Governor General to administer the oath to the Deputies.

Cosgrave Leads Off

Mr. Cosgrave was the first one to be sworn and to sign the roll. The form of the oath of allegiance was primarily to the Constitution of the Irish Free State and then to King George as the head of the peoples forming the British Commonwealth.

Mr. O'Higgins and the other Ministers took the oath in turn, followed by members of the Dail. The oath was administered to each man individually. Some of the military members, including Defense Minister Mulcahy, were in uniform.

When the ceremony was completed Professor Hayes was re-elected Speaker and Mr. Cosgrave President of the Cabinet.

Only two of the five Irish signatories of the treaty, Eamon J. Duggan and George Gavan Duffy, took the oath. Of the others, Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins are dead, and Robert C. Barton is in jail as a rebel.

Ministers Nominated

All the labor members were present and took the oath, with the exception of L. Gaffney, member for Carlow, who was the only member of the Dail to vote against the Constitution. He is expected to refuse the oath, thus leaving his constituency unrepresented.

Cathal O'Shannon, editor of the Voice of Labor, and noted for his advanced views, was one of those sworn in.

After his address Mr. Cosgrave nominated the following six Ministers as constituting with him an Executive Council: Kevin O'Higgins, Richard Mulcahy, Prof. John MacNeill, Ernest Blythe, Joseph McGrath and Desmond Fitzgerald. His nominations were accepted. (The council as formed is made up respectively of the Ministers of Home Affairs, Defense, Education, Local Government, Industrial, Commerce and Labor, and Foreign Affairs.)

STATE SUPERVISOR OF SCHOOLS HERE

Mr. J. Virgil Chapman, Supervisor of Rural Schools, Department of Education, of Frankfort, was in Hartford and Ohio County several days last week making a tentative survey of the County's schools. Mr. Chapman plans to return at an early date.

FARM DWELLING IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

The dwelling house of Mrs. Wayne N. Stevens, two miles north of Hartford, was completely destroyed by fire about 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. The blaze, starting from the roof, thought to have been caused by burning soot, enabled the neighbors to save some of the contents of the upper rooms and perhaps the larger portion of the contents of the lower part of the building.

The dwelling was a two-story building, comparatively new and one of the best farm homes on the North side of the river. Mrs. Stevens did not know of the fire until called over the phone by a neighbor, and such headway had been attained as to make saving of the building utterly impossible.

The property was partially insured, we understand.

REV. WALKER RECALLED
BY HARTFORD CHURCH

Rev. Russell Walker, for the last five years pastor of the Hartford Baptist Church, was called, as pastor for another year in a meeting of the congregation held Wednesday night. Being tendered the pastorate of the local Baptist Church for the sixth consecutive year, is a flattering tribute to Rev. Walker and the congregation and community are to be congratulated upon his re-election.

U. S. TO LOAN $7,500,000 TO DARK LEAF POOL

War Finance Body Gives Tacit Approval to Project as Aid To Tobacco Men.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Aid of the War Finance Corporation for the dark tobacco co-operative movement was enlisted today by a party of Kentuckians who made formal application to the directors of the corporation for an advance of $7,500,000. Tacit approval of the project was understood to have been given, though formal action on the loan will be taken by the directors later on.

After the conference, W. F. Bradshaw of Paducah, president of the Dark Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association of Kentucky and Tennessee announced that the Association's warehouses would begin receiving tobacco between now and Christmas.

Pool Heads Present

Aaron Sapiro of California, marketing expert and general counsel of the Association, helped Mr. Bradshaw to present the case. J. C. Utterback of Paducah, president of the City National Bank of that place, which is trustee for the pool, also participated in the conference, along with R. E. Cooper, director of warehouses, and James West of Hopkinsville, assistant grader of the Association.

The Kentuckians spent most of the day in explaining the plans and purposes of the new dark tobacco body before a full meeting of the corporation's directors. President Bradshaw later conferred with Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director and expressed satisfaction over the attitude shown by Mr. Meyer and his associates.

Mr. Meyer indicated that the directors had been impressed favorably. It was understood that no obstacle to formal approval of the proposed loan developed at the conference.

To Inspect New Leaf Pool

As in the case of the Burley Co-operative body, which obtained a loan of $10,000,000 from the corporation, the advance is sought only by a reserve credit, covering stored tobacco other than that financed by banks over the period of delivery, and, when made available, may never be actually drawn upon by the Association.

The usual procedure will be followed by the corporation in sending its own men to inspect the system and management of the new organization.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Impervious to the steady downpour of rain, twelve members of the Hartford Woman's Club were cordially welcomed by Mrs. John B. Wilson Saturday, December 9th, for another pleasant session of the Club. The afternoon was devoted to George Eliot. Mrs. R. D. Walker read a sketch of the life of the English authoress that showed research and skillful preparation. Mrs. T. L. Griffin substituted for Mrs. Anna J. Bennett, giving a short review of Silas Marner. The fourth famous woman elicited much discussion, being Mrs. Montgomery, the noted Baptist D. D., who presided in Washington, D. C., over the convention of the Northern branch of the church, a most significant event, showing the trend of the times. Mrs. Wilson served much enjoyed refreshments.

The Club will meet with Mrs. J. S. Glenn Saturday, the 16th.

CARSON—BARNARD

Miss Bodine Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Carson, of near Hartford, and Mr. Godfrey Barnard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thad Barnard, of Hartford, Route 2, were united in marriage at Owensboro by Judge Roy McFarland on last Saturday afternoon.

The newlyweds are most popular and estimable young people. We join their many other friends in wishing for them the utmost wedded happiness.

INFORMATION FROM THE EXPERIMENT STATION — AGRICULTURAL PAPERS AND THE COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

Farm Cow Now Making About 25 Cents A Day

Thousands of Kentucky farmers who are keeping a few cows from which to sell cream are facing the necessity of cutting down on rich protein feeds and using only those that are grown on the farm in order to get a fair return from their animals during the coming months, dairymen at the College of Agriculture say. At present prices being paid for butterfat, the average farm cow is returning a total of about 25 cents a day. With such feeds as cottonseed meal and linseed oil meal and linseed oil meal selling around $3 a hundred pounds and mill feeds and bran ranging around $40 a ton, the farmer cannot feed them and have anything left to pay him for the work he spends on his cows, the dairymen say.

"It takes about 20 pounds of milk to make a pound of butterfat. At this rate, the average farm cow in Kentucky does not yield more than half a pound of fat a day. Present indications are that this fat will not bring more than 50 cents a pound this season, thus making the daily return from the average farm cow about 25 cents a day.

"Every cow, regardless of whether she is of the dairy type or the average one on the farm, needs about 30 or 40 pounds of corn or sorghum silage a day and five or six pounds of clover, alfalfa, soybean or cowpea hay. If the farmer who is saving the cream from a few cows sets out to feed his animals like the commercial dairyman does, the extra grain feed that he would have to give in addition to this roughage every day would take 15 cents out of the 25 which he gets from each cow.

"The best the farmer can do under present conditions is to supplement this roughage of silage and hay with grain raised on the farm, such as broken ear corn, shelled corn, corn and cob meal, if this can be crushed, or crushed barley. The use of a protein feed, such as cottonseed meal or linseed oil meal, is necessary and profitable with the man who keeps a dairy type of cow and has a market for whole milk. However, this year the increase in the cost of all grain feeds for the dairy cow is going to make it unnecessary for even the commercial dairyman to use as many home grown feeds as possible."

Manure Yield In Kentucky Worth Millions To Farmers

Kentucky has enough livestock on her farms to yield annually at least 10,000,000 tons of manure worth millions of dollars for build-up farm lands, according to soils and crops specialists of the College of Agriculture. In view of the fact that Kentucky is a livestock state, this manure should be a big factor in keeping soils of the state rich. Half of this manure is produced in the winter when stock are on feed. It is at this time of the year that special effort to save the fertility in this material is needed.

"Half the fertilizing value of manure is in the liquid portion which may be easily and cheaply saved by being plenty of bedding. It has been estimated that by this one means alone, Todd county farmers last year saved 2,000 tons of manure more than ordinarily would have been saved. The best farmers in the state now keep manure in stables or feeding sheds until it can be spread on the fields, instead of throwing it in piles outside where it leaches and heats and loses much of its fertilizing value. A well bedded and tramped stall will keep manure in good condition.

"Many farmers in the state now spread the manure on their farms as fast as it is hauled to the fields. The old practice of throwing the material in small piles to be spread later is expensive and wasteful. Most farmers use a light application to cover as many acres as possible. An application of five tons to the acre has been found to give good results.

"Most of the farm manure in Kentucky is used on tobacco or corn land. This makes it necessary to spread it as fast as it is produced in the winter or hold it until spring before spreading. On level land, and especially where there is a sod, winter spreading can be done without loss. A few farmers make a practice of top dressing young grass and lover with manure. This helps considerably in getting and keeping a stand."

Breeding Ewes Repay Extra Grain Fed Now

Starvation kills, more breeding ewes in Kentucky during the winter than any other one cause, in the opinion of at least one prominent sheepman of the state. Many farmers in trying to be saving in their sheep feeding cut down on the feed they give their ewes during the winter with the result that, even if they do not die, they approach lambing time in a thin, weak condition that makes them poor mothers. Successful sheep raisers and breeders have shown that good feed for the breeding ewe started at this time of the year and continued through the winter is always repaid.

"A handful of grain fed to the ewe in December or the month preceding lambing time is worth a peck fed to a thin ewe after lambing," L. J. Horlacher, in charge of sheep work at the College of Agriculture says. "A ewe that is in good condition in the early part of the winter will be much stronger in the spring than one that starts the winter in poor flesh."

"Oats or a mixture of equal parts of oats and bran is a good grain mixture for the pregnant ewe. About a month before lambing time it is well to begin giving each ewe about one-fourth of a pound of grain a day. In case the weather is particularly severe, this can be increased gradually so that just before lambing the ewe is getting about a half pound of grain a day.

"If good grass is not available for pasture, a little hay should be added to the ration. A good legume hay, such as clover, alfalfa, or soy beans is best. Timothy hay should not be fed to sheep since it does them very little good and the heads of it work into the wool, thereby lowering its market value.

"The main reason for having ewes in good condition at lambing time

is the fact that they can take better care of their lambs than can thin weak ewes. It does not pay to try to raise lambs from sick or weakly ewes. Good feeding will do much to eliminate this type from the flock."

Few Apple Trees Escape San Jose Scale Damage

San Jose scale, one of the bad fruit tree pests, is just as serious, if not worse, in Kentucky apple orchards at the present time as it has ever been, according to A. J. Olney, a member of the horticultural department of the College of Agriculture. Few of the thousands of apple orchards in the state are free of the insect. The scale attacks the trunks, limbs, twigs and fruit and often cuts the yield of apples heavily before farmers notice it. Spraying with lime sulphur at this time of the year when the leaves are off the trees is the best way to control the pest.

The scale goes through the winter as a partly grown insect that matures in the spring. The number of insects increases rapidly throughout the summer. If the tree has become crusted with the scale, it is necessary to spray once at this time of the year and again in early spring. Light attacks of the scale may be controlled with one spray put on at this season in. However, it is almost impossible to get rid of the scale entirely with the result that spraying every year is necessary.

Several years ago the lime sulphur solution often was prepared right in the farm but the home cooked wash now has been generally replaced with the commercial forms. No material has proved better than the liquid lime sulphur for controlling the scale. In making the commercial liquid lime sulphur weak enough to use in spraying apple trees for the scale, one part of it should be added to eight parts of water. When made to this strength, the diluted solution should test between four and five degrees Baume by the hydrometer test. The standard commercial liquid should test 30 degrees Baume.

Bright, sunny days when there is little wind blowing are the best ones on which to spray since it is important to cover every part of the tree with the spray and have it dry before rain comes. Standard commercially prepared scaleicides sometimes give as good results in controlling the scale as the lime sulphur. Where the scale has become very bad, it may be advisable to use miscible oils in controlling it.

Best Season Here For Taking Farm Inventory

This is the best season of the year to take the farm inventory, according to W. D. Nicholls, head of the farm economics department of the College of Agriculture. The supply of feeds is low, salable crops usually have been marketed by this time and little work and money have been expended on the new year's crop. The four or five hours spent in taking the inventory make up about the most profitable half day of work that the farmer can put in during the year, Mr. Nicholls says.

The annual inventory forms the real foundation for the accounts kept on the farm business. Without the inventory, it is impossible to determine the farm profits for the year or what the farmer is actually worth. Such an inventory makes it possible for the farmer to compare his standing at the end of the year with his standing at the end of the previous year and shows him whether he has lost or made more. Another big advantage of the inventory is the fact that it makes it possible for the farmer to study and analyze the farm business to locate the weak places and take steps to correct them. The inventory also gives the farmer a good excuse to call in the tools and equipment that the neighbors have borrowed so that all equipment of the farm can be brought together and put in condition and its value compared with that of the previous year.

The inventory may be taken any time between now and the first of April, although if it is to be used in making an income tax report, it must be taken January 1. Once started, the inventory should be taken at the same time each year.

Not more than four or five hours should be needed to take and summarize the inventory. It should include a list of real estate, livestock, implements and machinery, feed and supplies on hand and all other property used in the interest of the farm business, to each item of which is assigned a proper value. This value should be conservative and should be, as nearly as possible, what the article would sell for, less the cost of getting it to market or what it would cost to replace it with an article equally as good. Estimates should be avoided and actual measures, weights and counts be given as nearly as possible.

Farm And Home News From Over Kentucky

Better feeding of hens so that they will lay more eggs in winter is getting attention from Morgan county farmers, County Agent R. B. Rankin says. Five of them recently made orders for tankage in order to supply their hens with animal protein, one of the things required in the ration before hens can lay the large number of eggs.

Junior agricultural club work not only is helping to keep Harlan county farm boys and girls satisfied with their lot in the country but also is helping many of them swell their bank accounts, County Agent Robert T. Harrison reports. During the past summer, one club member in the county made more than $115 from one tenth of an acre of tomatoes and another made a total of $338.50 from her garden on one-fifth of an acre.

Grayson county banks are co-operating with County Agent R. W. Scaree and the extension division of the College of Agriculture at Lexington in helping farmers in that section of the state put their farm business on a basis where it will pay a profit year after year. The Bank of Caneyville and the Bank of Clarkson will each furnish County Agent Scaree with 50 farm account books that will be distributed to 100 farmers so that they can keep systematic record of their business the coming year.

Crittenden county farmers are taking steps to replace scrub breeding animals of the county with pure breeds, according to reports of County Agent John R. Spencer. In one week recently 45 of them joined the nation wide Better Stock campaign by agreeing to use nothing but purebred sires in all their breeding work.

Fayette county farmers are showing increasing interest in the grading and better methods of marketing their farm products, County Agent W. R. Gabbert says. Good attendance and keen interest have marked recent demonstrations held over the county to show burley growers how to strip and grade their leaf crop.

Farm Cow Now Making About 25 Cents A Day

Thousands of Kentucky farmers who are keeping a few cows from which to sell cream are facing the necessity of cutting down on rich protein feeds and using only those that are grown on the farm in order to get a fair return from their animals during the coming months, dairymen at the College of Agriculture say. At present prices being paid for butterfat, the average farm cow is returning a total of about 25 cents a day. With such feeds as cottonseed meal and linseed oil meal and linseed oil meal selling around $3 a hundred pounds and m-l feeds and bran ranging around $40 a ton, the farmer cannot feed them and have anything left to pay him for the work he spends on his cows, the dairymen say.

"It takes about 20 pounds of milk to make a pound of butterfat. At this rate, the average farm cow in Kentucky does not yield more than half a pound of fat a day. Present indications are that this fat will not bring more than 50 cents a pound this season, thus making the daily return from the average farm cow about 25 cents a day.

"Every cow, regardless of whether she is of the dairy type or the average one on the farm, needs about 30 or 40 pounds of corn or sorghum silage a day and five or six pounds of clover, alfalfa, soybean or cowpea hay. If the farmer who is saving the cream from a few cows sets out to feed his animals like the commercial dairyman does, the extra grain feed that he would have to give in addition to this roughage every day would take 15 cents out of the 25 which he gets from each cow.

"The best the farmer can do under present conditions is to supplement this roughage of silage and hay with grain raised on the farm, such as broken ear corn, shelled corn, corn and cob meal, if this can be crushed, or crushed barley. The use of a protein feed, such as cottonseed meal or linseed oil meal, is necessary and profitable with the man who keeps a dairy type of cow and has a market for whole milk. However, this year the increase in the cost of all grain feeds for the dairy cow is going to make it unnecessary for even the commercial dairyman to use as many home grown feeds as possible."

Manure Yield In Kentucky Worth Millions To Farmers

Kentucky has enough livestock on her farms to yield annually at least 10,000,000 tons of manure worth millions of dollars for build-up farm lands, according to soils and crops specialists of the College of Agriculture. In view of the fact that Kentucky is a livestock state, this manure should be a big factor in keeping soils of the state rich. Half of this manure is produced in the winter when stock are on feed. It is at this time of the year that special effort to save the fertility in this material is needed.

"Half the fertilizing value of manure is in the liquid portion which may be easily and cheaply saved by being plenty of bedding. It has been estimated that by this one means alone, Todd county farmers last year saved 2,000 tons of manure more than ordinarily would have been saved. The best farmers in the state now keep manure in stables or feeding sheds until it can be spread on the fields, instead of throwing it in piles outside where it leaches and heats and loses much of its fertilizing value. A well bedded and tramped stall will keep manure in good condition.

"Many farmers in the state now spread the manure on their farms as fast as it is hauled to the fields. The old practice of throwing the material in small piles to be spread later is expensive and wasteful. Most farmers use a light application to cover as many acres as possible. An application of five tons to the acre has been found to give good results.

"Most of the farm manure in Kentucky is used on tobacco or corn land. This makes it necessary to spread it as fast as it is produced in the winter or hold it until spring before spreading. On level land, and especially where there is a sod, winter spreading can be done without loss. A few farmers make a practice of top dressing young grass and lower with manure. This helps considerably in getting and keeping a stand."

Breeding Ewes Repay Extra Grain Fed Now

Starvation kills, more breeding ewes in Kentucky during the winter than any other one cause, in the opinion of at least one prominent sheepman of the state. Many farmers in trying to be saving in their sheep feeding cut down on the feed they give their ewes during the winter with the result that, even if they do not die, they approach lambing time in a thin, weak condition that makes them poor mothers. Successful sheep raisers and breeders have shown that good feed for the breeding ewe started at this time of the year and continued through the winter is always repaid.

"A handful of grain fed to the ewe in December or the month preceding lambing time is worth a peck fed to a thin ewe after lambing," L. J. Horlacher, in charge of sheep work at the College of Agriculture says. "A ewe that is in good condition in the early part of the winter will be much stronger in the spring than one that starts the winter in poor flesh."

"Oats or a mixture of equal parts of oats and bran is a good grain mixture for the pregnant ewe. About a month before lambing time it is well to begin giving each ewe about one-fourth of a pound of grain a day. In case the weather is particularly severe, this can be increased gradually so that just before lambing the ewe is getting about a half pound of grain a day.

"If good grass is not available for pasture, a little hay should be added to the ration. A good legume hay, such as clover, alfalfa, or soy beans is best. Timothy hay should not be fed to sheep since it does them very little good and the heads of it work into the wool, thereby lowering its market value."

"The main reason for having ewes in good condition at lambing time

is the fact that they can take better care of their lambs than can thin weak ewes. It does not pay to try to raise lambs from sick or weakly ewes. Good feeding will do much to eliminate this type from the flock."

Few Apple Trees Escape San Jose Scale Damage

San Jose scale, one of the bad fruit tree pests, is just as serious, if not worse, in Kentucky apple orchards at the present time as it has ever been, according to A. J. Olney, a member of the horticultural department of the College of Agriculture. Few of the thousands of apple orchards in the state are free of the insect. The scale attacks the trunks, limbs, twigs and fruit and often cuts the yield of apples heavily before farmers notice it. Spraying with lime sulphur at this time of the year when the leaves are off the trees is the best way to control the pest.

The scale goes through the winter as a partly grown insect that matures in the spring. The number of insects increases rapidly throughout the summer. If the tree has become crusted with the scale, it is necessary to spray once at this time of the year and again in early spring. Light attacks of the scale may be controlled with one spray put on at this season in. However, it is almost impossible to get rid of the scale entirely with the result that spraying every year is necessary.

Several years ago the lime sulphur solution often was prepared right in the farm but the home cooked wash now has been generally replaced with the commercial forms. No material has proved better than the liquid lime sulphur for controlling the scale. In making the commercial liquid lime sulphur weak enough to use in spraying apple trees for the scale, one part of it should be added to eight parts of water. When made to this strength, the diluted solution should test between four and five degrees Baume by the hydrometer test. The standard commercial liquid should test 30 degrees Baume.

Bright, sunny days when there is little wind blowing are the best ones on which to spray since it is important to cover every part of the tree with the spray and have it dry before rain comes. Standard commercially prepared scaleicides sometimes give as good results in controlling the scale as the lime sulphur. Where the scale has become very bad, it may be advisable to use miscible oils in controlling it.

Best Season Here For Taking Farm Inventory

This is the best season of the year to take the farm inventory, according to W. D. Nichols, head of the farm economics department of the College of Agriculture. The supply of feeds is low, salable crops usually have been marketed by this time and little work and money have been expended on the new year's crop. The four or five hours spent in taking the inventory make up about the most profitable half day of work that the farmer can put in during the year, Mr. Nichols says.

The annual inventory forms the real foundation for the accounts kept on the farm business. Without the inventory, it is impossible to determine the farm profits for the year or what the farmer is actually worth. Such an inventory makes it possible for the farmer to compare his standing at the end of the year with his standing at the end of the previous year and shows him whether he has lost or made more. Another big advantage of the inventory is the fact that it makes it possible for the farmer to study and analyze the farm business to locate the weak places and take steps to correct them. The inventory also gives the farmer a good excuse to call in the tools and equipment that the neighbors have borrowed so that all equipment of the farm can be brought together and put in condition and its value compared with that of the previous year.

The inventory may be taken any time between now and the first of April, although if it is to be used in making an income tax report, it must be taken January 1. Once started, the inventory should be taken at the same time each year.

Not more than four or five hours should be needed to take and summarize the inventory. It should include a list real estate, livestock, implements and machinery, feed and supplies on hand and all other property used in the interest of the farm business, to each item of which is assigned a proper value. This value should be conservative and should be, as nearly as possible, what the article would sell for, less the cost of getting it to market or what it would cost to replace it with an article equally as good. Estimates should be avoided and actual measures, weights and counts be given as nearly as possible.

Farm And Home News From Over Kentucky

Better feeding of hens so that they will lay more eggs in winter is getting attention from Morgan county farmers, County Agent R. B. Rankin says. Five of them recently made orders for tankage in order to supply their hens with animal protein, one of the things required in the ration before hens can lay the largest number of eggs.

Junior agricultural club work not only is helping to keep Harlan county farm boys and girls satisfied with their lot in the country but also is helping many of them swell their bank accounts, County Agent Robert T. Harrison reports. During the past summer, one club member in the county made more than $115 from one tenth of an acre of tomatoes and another made a total of $338.50 from her garden on one-fifth of an acre.

Grayson county banks are co-operating with County Agent R. W. G. O. P. CALLS OFF SCRAP ON LYNCHING BILL

Caucus Gives Up In Despair After 3-Day Filibuster By Senate Democrats.

Washington, Dec. 2.—The Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill has been abandoned. No further efforts will be made during this Congress to obtain its passage in the Senate. Formal announcement to this effect will be made Monday by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the Republican leader. This determination automatically terminates the Democratic filibuster which has raged intermittently for three days. It will be dropped following the declaration of surrender of Mr. Lodge.

The throwing overboard of the Anti-Lynching Bill will result in the restoration of normal conditions in the Senate. A large number of nominations sent by the President since November 20 will receive attention preceding adjournment since Monday morning.

Expect Butler Approval

Included in the list of confirmations will be that of Pierce Butler, for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. This has been reported favorably from the Judiciary Committee. All charges preferred against the appointee have been pronounced without foundation. Unless unexpected opposition develops the approval of Butler will come Monday.

The agreement to pigeonhole the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill remains effective until the demise of this Congress March 4, next. Any future legislation on that subject must be taken through all the processes beginning with the presentation of a new measure. This will require much time before the stage of another filibuster by the Senate minority is reached.

An animated Republican conference preceded the promised withdrawal of the Dyer bill. Discussion was rampant for two solid hours. In fact, it resembled a miniature filibuster against the leader who said it was utterly useless to press the bill farther and deadlock all routine business. It was evident when the conference met that a vote would end the pending bill.

G. O. P. Defeated

Rather snappy speeches were made by three or four Senators who favored deferring the ship subsidy in order to continue pressing the Anti-Lynching measure. The persistence of the orators greatly irritated Senator Lodge, who believed it was time to end the wrangle.

When the advocates of the Dyer bill became exhausted a vote was taken and Senator Lodge received instructions to announce the withdrawal of the measure for this Congress.

Earlier in the day a conference of Republicans was held in Mr. Lodge's office. Senator Shortridge insisted on continuing the fight. It was determined to have a regular conference of the party later and let the responsibility for quitting be distributed all around.

The filibuster today opened in the usual fashion. Approval of the journal was refused. Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, declared that the "very important question of who read the Journal" had been omitted. "Future generations," he argued, "might desire to have this valuable information and could not obtain it." He moved the name of the reading clerk be inserted.

Filibuster Goes Strong

Producing a bunch of law books, Senator Overman, Democrat, North Carolina, began a set speech against the bill. He said a large proportion of legal experts believe it unconstitutional. "I believe the minority is fully justified in filibustering against it," he said. "The majority cannot criticize us for filibustering against it to preserve a fundamental principle. The very integrity of the Government is at stake."

Many filibusters waged by the Republicans were recalled by Overman. He said all those most active in bringing this bill forward went down to defeat in November. He protested against arousing hate for the purpose of capturing a few negro votes in the North. He said all negroes vote the Republican ticket anyway, and there is no political necessity for such legislation.

"There is no demand for such a bill from the negroes of the South," said Overman. "There has been no sectional bill in thirty years. Why bring it up now? Why not let us rest in peace and prosperity and happiness?"

Overman related his experience in attempting to quiet a mob in North Carolina to prevent the prospective lynching of six men. He expressed deep regret at being unable to complete his argument and promised to do so at some future time.

LEXINGTON MAN

TO GO TO OXFORD

Swarthmore, Pa., Dec. 3.—The results of the annual election of American Rhodes scholars to the Oxford University held yesterday in thirty-two States, were announced today by President Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore College, American Secretary to the Rhodes trustees.

Thirty-two Rhodes scholars are appointed from the United States each year. A scholarship is tenable for three years and carries with it a stipend of 350 pounds a year. The selection is made on the threefold basis of character and personality, scholastic ability and physical vigor, whether shown by participation in outdoor sports or in other ways.

For the thirty-two appointments made yesterday there were 344 candidates. Those elected, subject to the ratification of the Rhodes trustees, together with the institution from which they are accredited and their present address included:

Kentucky—W. S. Haynes, Centre College, 446 Rose Lane, Lexington, Ky.

Indiana—R. D. Spea, Notre Dame University, 5 Shepard Street, Cambridge, Mass.

Tennessee—Edwin Mims, Jr., Yale University, Yale University Press, New York City.

KENTUCKY FIFTH

IN PLAQUE TOLL

Washington, Dec. 3.—Only Colorado, Tennessee, Virginia and California, in that order, had higher tuberculosis death rates than Kentucky in 1921, according to Census Bureau figures made public today. With 3,197 deaths from the disease during the year, Kentucky's tuberculosis death rate is 136.6 to every 100,000 of population. Indiana, with 2,752 deaths, had a rate of 89.7.

Statistics were available from only thirty-four States. In this area there were 88,000 tuberculosis deaths in 1921, a rate of 99.4. The Census Bureau estimates the total number of tuberculosis deaths in the entire country for the year at about 107,000, as compared with 1920 estimate of 122,000.

In the States with large negro populations, the Bureau calculated the rates separately for whites and negroes. In this group, Kentucky showed the highest tuberculosis death rates for both the white and negro populations. Kentucky's white tuberculosis death rate for the year was 115.7 and the negro tuberculosis death rate 326.1.

In spite of Kentucky's showing for 1921, the figures show health conditions improving in the State. There were 3,705 tuberculosis deaths in 1920 and 3,982 in 1919, as against 3,197 last year.

ELEVEN DIE WHEN

LAKE STEAMER SINKS

Houghton, Mich., Dec. 1.—Eleven men, members of the crew of the Canadian steamer Maplehurst, lost their lives early this morning when the vessel foundered near the upper or canal entrance to the Keweenaw Waterway. Nine others were saved by Captain Charles A. Tucker and the members of the crew of the coast guard station at the canal.

Not a single life would have been lost, Captain Tucker declared, if the men on the doomed steamer had acted promptly and jumped into the coast guard power boat when he told them to, as he brought it alongside the Maplehurst and every man aboard had a chance to get off. Ten out of the twenty on board jumped. First Mate Henry J. Smith missed the lifeboat and went to his death in the lake. The nine others who jumped were saved while the ten who remained on the Maplehurst perished.

DEATH TAKES MATE;

WIFE DIES OF SHOCK

Hickman, Ky., Dec. 3.—Returning home in his automobile from the Christian Church here at 4 o'clock this afternoon, where he had been to get his family, S. N. Sweeney, 55 years old, rural mail carrier, stopped his car in the middle of the street and fell dead across the steering wheel. His wife, Mrs. Eddye Sweeney, 48, died fifteen minutes later from the shock.

Miss Bernice Warren, 13 years old, a niece of Mrs. Sweeney in the car at the time, is in a serious condition from fright and excitement.

The fatal coincidence occurred within fifty yards of the Sweeney home on the edge of town.

COUNTY AGENT INSPIRA-

TION FOR McLEAN

Boys' and Girls' Club Camp One Of High Marks of Ford's Work.

(BY RALPH COGHLAN)

Calhoun, Ky., Oct. 25.—About a year ago R. H. Ford strode into McLean county courthouse to apply for that most important position—county agent. He got it. The work of a county agent is such that its result cannot be tabulated. Therefore it need only be said that you can't go far in McLean county without learning that young Mr. Ford has won a definite place in the hearts and in the esteem of the citizens of the county.

He brought to his work a fund of native enthusiasm and electric energy. Those two qualities were supplemented by a thorough knowledge of agriculture and a desire to win the confidence of the community. Perhaps the most outstanding thing in Mr. Ford's personality is a willingness to work.

"After a year in this work," he was asked, "do you find that many of the farmers come to see you?"

"No," he replied. "I go out to see them."

So much of Mr. Ford's time has been spent traveling from place to place throughout the county that he is rarely at his office in Calhoun.

They tell this story in McLean county. A farmer on the way to Calhoun stopped another who had just come from there.

"Have you seen Ford?" asked the first man.

"Why do you ask me?" demanded the second. "I've just come from Calhoun."

Mr. Ford's conception of the duties of a county agent is broader than merely to teach modern agricultural methods. He believes the county agent should inject himself into the life of the community and then become a leader in all things that minister to its good. In rural districts, one of the most important things is to get the community to work together, to play together and to think along the same lines.

Accordingly, Mr. Ford believes that at least one-third of a county agent's time should be spent in club work. It is in this direction that he has concentrated with notable success.

The county is still talking about a boys' and girls' club camp that was held at Oak Grove in August under Mr. Ford's direction and backed by such men as A. L. Moseley, Walter Scott and Alec Quirk. It was the first thing of its kind ever held here and was such a great source of profit and enjoyment that the county will never forget it.

Mr. Ford ascribes credit for the camp to "the most whole-hearted and generous co-operation I have ever witnessed." The county figuratively arose as one person to help. Labor, horses, time and money were given freely and spontaneously.

A Blue Ribbon Affair

Of the camp itself, it was said by C. W. Buckler, chieftain of such work for the State, that "prizes aren't given for the best camp in the State. If they were I think McLean would get the blue ribbon."

One hundred and ten McLean boys and girls out of a total club membership of 210, and seventy-six Muhlenberg youngsters attended the camp. Extensive programs were arranged, which kept everything humming from reveille to taps.

The morning was devoted to lectures and classes on various subjects, such as table-setting and table manners, nature study and dairying. The afternoon was given over to games and athletics and best of all were the evenings around a huge campfire when songs were sung and talks were made. Through a fortunate circumstance Dr. W. D. Funkhauser, head of the zoology department of the University of Kentucky, attended the camp, and because of his winning personality and interesting talks, has carved a high place for himself in the minds of McLean boys and girls.

The camp was the culmination and the high point of Mr. Ford's year of club work. It is difficult, perhaps, for city people to understand how vital good clubs, both junior and senior, are in rural life. Nevertheless it is true that they not only make life more pleasant, but they form character in the young people.

The Wherefore of Clubs

"Good clubs," says Mr. Ford, "make better farmers and better home builders. They are founded on the principle of co-operation, of concerted effort. In peace as well as in war, the adage holds good that in union there is strength. The little boys and girls who work together and play together for the common good and the common pleasure will be likely to do the same thing in more important directions when they grow up.

"Unselfishness, good sportsmanship, manliness and womanliness are taught in good clubs. Through them the rural children get a broader vision and are inspired with higher ideals. Moreover, they get some very practical benefits. They are encouraged, for example, to overcome shyness. They are taught to mix and to get along easily with strangers. Each, too, is required at such events as a camp to make a little talk before an audience or perform some kind of stunt.

Ministers To the Four H's

"In this way they conquer that feeling of self-consciousness which all of us have possessed at one time or another. Club work ministers to the head, the hand, the heart and the health. It teaches good farming, it instructs in the use of tools, it appeals to a child's unselfishness and to his best nature, and it stresses the importance of good physique.

"We have been teaching McLean county children the dangers of tuberculosis and the measures to be taken to avoid it. It seems to me if we save one life of one of these children all the work will have been justified."

At this point Mr. Ford became subject to one of the innumerable calls upon his time and hustled away, leaving one somewhat dazed by the many-sided and difficult nature of a county agent's work.

Included in the list of confirmations will be that of Pierce Butler, for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. This has been reported favorably from the Judiciary Committee. All charges preferred against the appointee have been pronounced without foundation. Unless unexpected opposition develops the approval of Butler will come Monday.

The agreement to pigeonhole the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill remains effective until the demise of this Congress March 4, next. Any future legislation on that subject must be taken through all the processes beginning with the presentation of a new measure. This will require much time before the stage of another filibuster by the Senate minority is reached.

An animated Republican conference preceded the promised withdrawal of the Dyer bill. Discussion was rampant for two solid hours. In fact, it resembled a miniature filibuster against the leader who said it was utterly useless to press the bill farther and deadlock all routine business. It was evident when the conference met that a vote would end the pending bill.

G. O. P. Defeated

Rather snappy speeches were made by three or four Senators who favored deferring the ship subsidy in order to continue pressing the Anti-Lynching measure. The persistence of the orators greatly irritated Senator Lodge, who believed it was time to end the wrangle.

When the advocates of the Dyer bill became exhausted a vote was taken and Senator Lodge received instructions to announce the withdrawal of the measure for this Congress.

Earlier in the day a conference of Republicans was held in Mr. Lodge's office. Senator Shortridge insisted on continuing the fight. It was determined to have a regular conference of the party later and let the responsibility for quitting be distributed all around.

The filibuster today opened in the usual fashion. Approval of the Journal was refused. Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, declared that the "very important question of who read the Journal" had been omitted. "Future generations," he argued, "might desire to have this valuable information and could not obtain it." He moved the name of the reading clerk be inserted.

Filibuster Goes Strong

Producing a bunch of law books, Senator Overman, Democrat, North Carolina, began a set speech against the bill. He said a large proportion of legal experts believe it unconstitutional. "I believe the minority is fully justified in filibustering against it," he said. "The majority cannot criticize us for filibustering against it to preserve a fundamental principle. The very integrity of the Government is at stake."

Many filibusters waged by the Republicans were recalled by Overman. He said all those most active in bringing this bill forward went down to defeat in November. He protested against arousing hate for the purpose of capturing a few negro votes in the North. He said all negroes vote the Republican ticket anyway, and there is no political necessity for such legislation.

"There is no demand for such a bill from the negroes of the South," said Overman. "There has been no sectional bill in thirty years. Why bring it up now? Why not let us rest in peace and prosperity and happiness?"

Overman related his experience in attempting to quiet a mob in North Carolina to prevent the prospective lynching of six men. He expressed deep regret at being unable to complete his argument and promised to do so at some future time.

LEXINGTON MAN TO GO TO OXFORD

Swarthmore, Pa., Dec. 3.—The results of the annual election of American Rhodes scholars to the Oxford University held yesterday in thirty-two States, were announced today by President Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore College, American Secretary to the Rhodes trustees.

Thirty-two Rhodes scholars are appointed from the United States each year. A scholarship is tenable for three years and carries with it a stipend of 350 pounds a year. The selection is made on the threefold basis of character and personality, scholastic ability and physical vigor, whether shown by participation in outdoor sports or in other ways.

For the thirty-two appointments made yesterday there were 344 candidates. Those elected, subject to the ratification of the Rhodes trustees, together with the institution from which they are accredited and their present address included:

Kentucky—W. S. Haynes, Centre College, 446 Rose Lane, Lexington, Ky.

Indiana—R. D. Spea, Notre Dame University, 5 Shepard Street, Cambridge, Mass.

Tennessee—Edwin Mims, Jr., Yale University, Yale University Press, New York City.

KENTUCKY FIFTH IN PLAGUE TOLL

Washington, Dec. 3.—Only Colorado, Tennessee, Virginia and California, in that order, had higher tuberculosis death rates than Kentucky in 1921, according to Census Bureau figures made public today. With 3,197 deaths from the disease during the year, Kentucky's tuberculosis death rate is 136.6 to every 100,000 of population. Indiana, with 2,752 deaths, had a rate of 89.7.

Statistics were available from only thirty-four States. In this area there were 88,000 tuberculosis deaths in 1921, a rate of 99.4. The Census Bureau estimates the total number of tuberculosis deaths in the entire country for the year at about 107,000, as compared with 1920 estimate of 122,000.

In the States with large negro populations, the Bureau calculated the rates separately for whites and negroes. In this group, Kentucky showed the highest tuberculosis death rates for both the white and negro populations. Kentucky's white tuberculosis death rate for the year was 115.7 and the negro tuberculosis death rate 326.1.

In spite of Kentucky's showing for 1921, the figures show health conditions improving in the State. There were 3,705 tuberculosis deaths in 1920 and 3,982 in 1919, as against 3,197 last year.

ELEVEN DIE WHEN LAKE STEAMER SINKS

Houghton, Mich., Dec. 1.—Eleven men, members of the crew of the Canadian steamer Maplehurst, lost their lives early this morning when the vessel foundered near the upper or canal entrance to the Keweenaw Waterway. Nine others were saved by Captain Charles A. Tucker and the members of the crew of the coast guard station at the canal.

Not a single life would have been lost, Captain Tucker declared, if the men on the doomed steamer had acted promptly and jumped into the coast guard power boat when he told them to, as he brought it alongside the Maplehurst and every man aboard had a chance to get off. Ten out of the twenty on board jumped. First Mate Henry J. Smith missed the lifeboat and went to his death in the lake. The nine others who jumped were saved while the ten who remained on the Maplehurst perished.

DEATH TAKES MATE; WIFE DIES OF SHOCK

Hickman, Ky., Dec. 3.—Returning home in his automobile from the Christian Church here at 4 o'clock this afternoon, where he had been to get his family, S. N. Sweeney, 55 years old, rural mail carrier, stopped his car in the middle of the street and fell dead across the steering wheel. His wife, Mrs. Eddye Sweeney, 48, died fifteen minutes later from the shock.

Miss Bernice Warren, 13 years old, a niece of Mrs. Sweeney in the car at the time, is in a serious condition from fright and excitement.

The fatal coincidence occurred within fifty yards of the Sweeney home on the edge of town.

COUNTY AGENT INSPIRATION FOR McLEAN

Boys' and Girls' Club Camp One
Of High Marks of Ford's

Calhoun, Ky., Oct. 25.—About a year ago R. H. Ford strode into McLean county courthouse to apply for that most important position—county agent. He got it. The work of a county agent is such that its result cannot be tabulated. Therefore it need only be said that you can't go far in McLean county without learning that young Mr. Ford has won a definite place in the hearts and in the esteem of the citizens of the county.

He brought to his work a fund of native enthusiasm and electric energy. Those two qualities were supplemented by a thorough knowledge of agriculture and a desire to win the confidence of the community. Perhaps the most outstanding thing in Mr. Ford's personality is a willingness to work.

"After a year in this work," he was asked, "do you find that many of the farmers come to see you?"

"No," he replied. "I go out to see them."

So much of Mr. Ford's time has been spent traveling from place to place throughout the county that he is rarely at his office in Calhoun.

They tell this story in McLean county. A farmer on the way to Calhoun stopped another who had just come from there.

"Have you seen Ford?" asked the first man.

"Why do you ask me?" demanded the second. "I've just come from Calhoun."

Mr. Ford's conception of the duties of a county agent is broader than merely to teach modern agricultural methods. He believes the county agent should inject himself into the life of the community and then become a leader in all things that minister to its good. In rural districts, one of the most important things is to get the community to work together, to play together and to think along the same lines.

Accordingly, Mr. Ford believes that at least one-third of a county agent's time should be spent in club work. It is in this direction that he has concentrated with notable success.

The county is still talking about a boys and girls' club camp that was held at Oak Grove in August under Mr. Ford's direction and backed by such men as A. L. Moseley, Walter Scott and Alec Quirk. It was the first thing of its kind ever held here and was such a great source of profit and enjoyment that the county will never forget it.

Mr. Ford ascribes credit for the camp to "the most whole-hearted and generous co-operation I have ever witnessed." The county figuratively arose as one person to help. Labor, horses, time and money were given freely and spontaneously.

A Blue Ribbon Affair

Of the camp itself, it was said by C. W. Buckler, chieftain of such work for the State, that "prizes aren't given for the best camp in the State. If they were I think McLean would get the blue ribbon."

One hundred and ten McLean boys and girls out of a total club membership of 210, and seventy-six Muhlenberg youngsters attended the camp. Extensive programs were arranged, which kept everything humming from reveille to taps.

The morning was devoted to lectures and classes on various subjects, such as table-setting and table manners, nature study and dairying. The afternoon was given over to games and athletics and best of all were the evenings around a huge campfire when songs were sung and talks were made. Through a fortunate circumstance Dr. W. D. Funkhauser, head of the zoology department of the University of Kentucky, attended the camp, and, because of his winning personality and interesting talks, has carved a high place for himself in the minds of McLean boys and girls.

The camp was the culmination and the high point of Mr. Ford's year of club work. It is difficult, perhaps, for city people to understand how vital good clubs, both junior and senior, are in rural life. Nevertheless it is true that they not only make life more pleasant, but they form character in the young people.

The Wherefore of Clubs

"Good clubs," says Mr. Ford, "make better farmers and better home builders. They are founded on the principle of co-operation, of concerted effort. In peace as well as in war, the adage holds good that in a union there is strength. The little boys and girls who work together and play together for the common good and the common pleasure will be likely to do the same thing in more important directions when they grow up.

"Unselfishness, good sportsmanship, manliness and womanliness are taught in good clubs. Through them the rural children get a broader vision and are inspired with higher ideals. Moreover, they get some very practical benefits. They are encouraged, for example, to overcome shyness. They are taught to mix and to get along easily with strangers. Each, too, is required at such events as a camp to make a little talk before an audience or perform some kind of stunt.

Ministers To the Four H's

"In this way they conquer that feeling of self-consciousness which all of us have possessed at one time or another. Club work ministers to the head, the hand, the heart and the health. It teaches good farming, it instructs in the use of tools, it appeals to a child's unselfishness and to his best nature, and it stresses the importance of good physique.

"We have been teaching McLean county children the dangers of tuberculosis and the measures to be taken to avoid it. It seems to me if we save one life of one of these children all the work we'll have been justified."

At this point Mr. Ford became subject to one of the innumerable calls upon his time and hustled away, leaving one somewhat dazed by the many-sided and difficult nature of a county agent's work.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 13, 1922

A great deal of argument has been stirred up over the location of the two new State Normal Schools, which have finally been awarded to Murray and Morehead. Charges of bias in the selection of the sites have been freely made in certain quarters and there were, perhaps, some untoward indications of actual or attempted use of undue influence, but, after all is said and done, the Commission might have done far worse. To complicate matters, the question as to where lies the authority to select the heads of the schools has had to be taken to the courts. The whole situation is indeed unfortunate, but time and patience will clarify it. Why should the interests of education be jeopardized in the State by a special session of the Legislature, as has been proposed, when its almost certain outcome would be the absolute repeal of the Normal School act. The progress of teacher-training already in prospect has been hardly won. Let's hold our ground.

MISS DENT PHIPPS, MEMBER OF PIONEER FAMILY, DEAD

Miss Emanthis Dent Phipps, one of the best-known and most beloved residents of this section of the county, died at her home near Hartford, Sunday morning at 5:25 o'clock, after an illness of thirty days of colitis and complications, aged 75 years, 11 months and 24 days. Miss Phipps was a member of one of Ohio County's oldest and most prominent families, being the daughter of Elijah Phipps and Sarah E. (Nicholls) Phipps, the latter having been a native of Muhlenburg County. She is survived by one brother, John R. Phipps, of Hartford, and a number of nephews, nieces and more remote relatives.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. T. T. Frazier, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiating. Interment was in Oakwood Cemetery. "Miss Dent" as she was affectionately known to her host of friends, had spent her life in unselfish usefulness and charitable neighborliness. She was beloved by rich and poor, high and low. No better proof of her real worth could be given than the fact that she was the cherished friend of the children. Without respect to creed, color or condition, she was the "friend of man"—in the making—"in her house by the side of the road." Little folks and big of this community bless her memory.

The Most Appropriate Gift.

Ever since the Three Wise Men followed the Star to the Lowly Manger at Bethlehem, bearing gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh, the Christian world has commemorated Christmas time with like expressions.

Each year Jewelry is becoming more appropriate as gifts. Good Jewelry lasts longer than most any present you can buy and is appreciated more as it is used as a personal adornment.

A partial list of the too numerous articles to mention are:

The new star diamond, white gold setting.

White, Wile and Warner set rings, in which the stones are guaranteed to stay.

A big line of Wrist Watches, cheap this year.

Ear screws,

Pearl and Bead Necklaces, Broaches and all kinds of Silver Vanity Cases.

Hair ornaments.

Ivory goods, Ivory Clocks.

Fountain Pens.

Toilet Sets.

Silver bar pins, with brilliant sets.

Gent's set, Signet and Emblem Rings.

Scarf Pins, Cuff Buttons.

Watches, a fine line, any price.

Also see the new silver, gold and gold-filled belt loop Chains. They are the thing for gent's.

Also all other kinds of chains.

Cut Glass, Clocks, Hand-painted China, Silver and Silver-plated ware, Gillette Safety Razors.

Eastman Kodaks and Films.

In fact anything usually kept in a First-Class Jewelry Store.

And you will regret it, if you fail to see our line before making your purchase.

Our stock consists of the highest grade wares, bought with TWENTY-TWO YEARS' EXPERIENCE OF BUYING and at PRICES LOWER than we have been able to make for several years.

The Green Christmas

by

IT WAS not a very cheerful boy that was looking out of the window at what little dirty ice the winter thaw had left upon the hill in front of the house. Through the fine conasting days he had heard the happy noise of the sledding while the doctor had said that he could not go out and join in it, and now, though he might soon be out of doors again, there was no surety of as good a hill again and small prospect of sport.

It wasn't a very cheerful house, either. Mr. Bondage was a chainmaker, and when he came home from his iron works he always seemed to bring his business with him. The house of Bondage was big and strong, but it was hard, and still, and dark, and too orderly. From the outside it looked like a fort, and inside, the chairs stood at attention, like soldiers. The parlor was a solemn place, where the stiff furniture was seldom prevented from looking at itself in the gilded mirror. The dining room didn't get the sun until towards evening, when the motto, "Be Good and You Will Be Happy" could be as plainly seen as the one on the opposite wall, "Children Should Be Seen but Not Heard." When the boy put on his hated bib there, it exhorted him with, "Don't Eat Too Much."

Chained to the front porch was an iron dog, whose fixed and ferocious snarl was a standing insult to all the village dogs that could get through the iron fence to dispute with him. There was some fun about the place; it was when a surprised dog retired from the attack with a new respect for the tough guardian of the Bondage interests. Even the iron-clad knight in the front hall seemed to laugh through his visor then.

Besides all this, Ishmael had had no Christmas. Mr. Bondage did not believe in Christmas; to him Santa Claus was a foolish imagination and a hurtful superstition. He had joined "The Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving," and was glad to be called a Spuz. On December 25th he had presented to his son a picture of himself, standing in front of his office with the scowl upon his face that represented his idea of the expression of greatness, but the only comfort of the day for the boy had been the sweet contents of the small package that his mother had smuggled into his room just before daylight.

But Ishmael Bondage had an Aunt Sarah! And Aunt Sarah had the pleasantest home in the country. It was a low, wide, rambling old house, in the midst of the trees and hugged by the climbing vines that loved it. There wasn't a place in it too good to be used and in its snowy whiteness it seemed to shine out upon the fenceless grounds with an invitation to the hospitality of its gardens and the good cheer of its friendly owners. That was the bright spot for Ishmael. When he went out there his aunt would hang his Fauntleroy suit up in the closet and give him a leather suit that could not be torn and tell him to go it. He could eat without a bill and there was not a motto in sight. By the time that vacation was over he was a real boy. The other boys stopped calling him "S'ssy" and no longer asked him if his mother knew he was out. Indeed, he up and thrashed a bullying boy who had knocked over one of his companions who was about half his size. After this there was nothing that he could not have among his crowd. So every vacation sent a prim but joyful boy to Aunt Sarah and closed with a more robust but rather dejected one on his way home.

But Aunt Sarah also had a mind of her own. She had so much mind that she had concluded that winter to go and give Benjamin Bondage a piece of it. She considered Ishmael's state and situation and resolved to give his father "a good talking to." When she appeared Mr. Bondage felt that his time had probably come. When she had finished he knew it had. She told him that he had forgotten that he was ever a boy, if, indeed, he had ever been one, that he had made himself into an iron man, that he was blind-eyed and hard-hearted, that he seemed determined to fasten all his chains upon Ishmael and make his son as stiff and cold as an icicle.

Mrs. Bondage, behind the door, expected her husband to object in loud and angry tones, but, to her astonishment, he was silent. He seemed to remember an old motto, "Discretion Is the Better Part of Valor," profitably, and did not interfere, even when Aunt Sarah, flushed, but triumphant, carried Ishmael off.

There was some winter play left and to come at Sweetfield, but Aunt Sarah wasn't satisfied as easily as that, for she had made up the rest of her mind into an idea that Ishmael should have the Christmas that he hadn't had, after all. It wasn't much of a Christmas day when the belated Christmas tree blossomed and bore fruit, but it was a fine tree. The snow and ice had disappeared and a warm wind made the late winter seem like early spring, but Aunt Sarah said that evergreen trees kept Christmas all the year round, and that every day was their day. Certainly it was the most interesting tree that Ishmael had ever seen, from the bundle at the bottom, through all the ornaments, lights and gifts, to the mysterious package at the top of it shone with kind and thoughtful love and sparkled with merry wishes and glad promise. They and the children from the neighborhood who had come to share the joy and the presents that Aunt Sarah had prepared were wondering what would be found in that last parcel at the top, until it was taken down, and then a part of the party, at least, was surprised when the wrapping was taken off and a wonderful pocketknife, beside a first-class football, conveyed merry wishes from Mr. Bondage to his son. Aunt Sarah said afterwards that at this she nearly "went off the handle."

When May came it seemed time for Ishmael to go home, but he was not very happy at the prospect. Indeed, he was rather unhappy about it. He felt something like one on his way to jail, and even shed tears at the thought of leaving Sweetfield, so that a squirrel, seeing him wiping his eyes under a tree, exclaimed "Oh, what a rainy boy!" but the day came and Ishmael went.

Another surprise awaited him, however, for, as he neared home and entered it, everything seemed changed. The house looked sunny and pleasant in its new colors, the fence had disappeared, the iron dog had been moved to the barn, and the mailed knight had gone down to the ironworks to be turned into plowshares.

When Mr. Bondage went out to Sweetfield to visit his sister and to report upon Ishmael's progress, Aunt Sarah had her reward. "It is all your doing, Sarah," said he. "I needed someone to show me up to myself." "Well, brother," said Aunt Sarah, "A Stitch in Time Saves Nine," as the proverb has it, and you certainly will be proud of our boy yet, as proud of him as I am of my big, new brother."

When December came blustering around again and brought Santa Claus and all his load of love and jollity, there was no place that more warmly welcomed him than Mount Freedom, as Mr. Bondage's home had come to be called, and of all the happy Christmas parties of that year, none was fuller of mirth and good cheer than the one at Mount Freedom. They danced about the tree and under the motto that hung from the top of it with its message of good will to everybody, the football was kicked all over the floor and they shouted in their glee. The squeaking toys, the tooting whistles, the happy songs, all made the time as merry as it ought always to be, while the gifts spoke messages of love.

Ishmael had prospered enough in his studies to make a picture of Sweetfield. It hung over the mantel shelf in the living room and under it he had written, "The Home of the Green Christmas." When anyone asked him about it he would tell them how spring once came in a wintry time; he would say that while Christmas comes but once a year, it sometimes comes twice, and that whenever it comes it brings good cheer; but he was never able to make a picture of his Aunt Sarah that seemed to him good enough.

NAVY SECOND TO NONE IS POLICY OF DENBY

Washington, Dec. 3.—A general naval policy providing for a navy "second to none" and strong enough to support American policies and commerce and guard American continental and overseas possessions was laid down today by Secretary Denby in his annual report to Congress.

Such a navy, the Secretary said, should and could be maintained within the provisions of the Naval Limitation Treaty. He added that although the present naval establishment was deficient in certain types he would make no immediate recommendation for additional appropriations because of the present financial condition of the country.

Among the accomplishments of his department during the last year he recounted "the development of aviation as an integral part of the fleet," diversion of a greater percentage of repair work to Government stations, increased steaming efficiency of battle craft, return of the officer personnel to a permanent basis after the temporary enlargement during the war, an extension of the navy school facilities for enlisted men, and inauguration of extensive and advanced experiments in gunnery.

SMALL FREES DROSS LLOYD AND 16 'REDS'

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 29.—Sentences of William Bross Lloyd and sixteen associates, serving sentences in the Joliet Penitentiary and the Cook County jail for violation of the State anti-syndicalism law, today were commuted to expire at once by Governor Len Small.

The commutations were presented as Thanksgiving gifts to the prisoners. They were released tonight. The prisoners began serving their sentences last week.

In taking this action Mr. Small announced he was in full accord with the dissenting opinion of Justice Carter of the Supreme Court, who contrary to the majority opinion, questioned the constitutionality of the syndicalism law, when the court decided the men must serve their sentences.

Small Cites Reasons

"No human agency," declared the Governor, "can accurately determine how long any human being shall be incarcerated. These men are not criminals. Since their indictment and conviction in March, 1921, they have suffered severely. I declined to extend clemency in their cases prior to their incarceration. No great good can come from longer incarceration for them."

That the anti-syndicalism law was "war psychology" and that while it might be well in times of war, enforcement of such a law "might be very shortsighted in times of peace" was the contention of Justice Carter in his dissenting opinion.

BRITAIN SEVERS TIE WITH GREECE

Athens, Nov. 28.—The British Minister, F. O. Lindley, has notified the Greek Government that Great Britain has broken off relations with Greece, and that he is leaving Athens tonight.

C. H. Bentinck, British member of the financial control, remains here.

Athens, Nov. 28.—The six former Cabinet officers and army officials convicted of high treason in connection with the Greek military disaster in Asia Minor were executed today.

The execution of the condemned men was by shooting. The men executed were:

Former Premiers Gounaris, Protapadakis and Stratos; M. Theokitis, former War Minister M. Baltazis, holder of portfolios in several former Cabinets, and General Hadjanezis, commander of the Greek forces at the time of the Asia Minor military disaster.

A sentence of life imprisonment and degradation was imposed upon Admiral Goudas and General Stratigos.

Early in the trial the British Government made objection to possible imposition of the death sentence. London dispatches said the British action had been generally resented in Athens and that the recent fall of the Zaimis ministry could be traced directly to the British stand.

PRINCE ANDREW TO BE EXILED AND DEGRADED

London, Dec. 2.—Prince Andrew has been sentenced to perpetual banishment by the court martial sitting at Athens, according to a Renter dispatch. In addition he will suffer degradation in the army. The refusal of Prince Andrew to obey orders resulted in defeat for the Greeks in the campaign at the sagaris River, according to General Papoulas; had the Second Army attacked victory was possible.

General Papoulas admitted that Prince Andrew had not been dismissed from his command, because he was the King's brother.

Harrisburg, Ark., Dec. 5, 1922.
Hartford Herald,
Hartford, Ky.

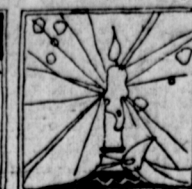

Dear Mr. Editor:—Find enclosed check for ($1.50), one dollar and fifty cents, for which mark me up on the paper. We are always so glad to get the old home paper, can hardly wait to get it. I have been a subscriber to the Herald for about forty years and don't want to be without it now. Would be glad to see some more pieces from our old friend L. T. Reid.

Respectfully,
J. E. MADDOX.

The Treasure House of Christmas Gifts

What an enrichment of life Christmas brings! It brings a twinkle to the eye, a smile to the lip. It gives to every home the cheer that marks the day with love. It warms us with a fellow feeling for child and adult. It stirs us with a spirit to give.

We cannot too soon embrace this exhilarating spirit. Time is too brief to lag. Right now—while there is ample elbow room, fresh and full assortments of merchandise, the salespeople unwearied—is the time for the adventure of Christmas shopping at the Treasure House of Christmas Gifts. Shop early, and shop early in the day.
